Soviet Delegates at Economic Parley Explain Foreign Concerns' Failure

Wireless via Postal Telegraph from Halifax

GENEVA, May 14-How anxious the Soviet delegation is to persuade the industrialists of other countries that Russia offers a good field for investment, may be gathered from the long explanation which Mr. Varga, Russia, gave the press about the reasons for the failure of foreign companies to make good in Russia. Taking the Lena goldfields and the Harriman concessions as two notorious instances, he maintained that their failure was due to insufficiency of capital, and insufficiently elastic management.

Russia, he declared, was now in a different position and able to give long-term concessions instead of short term, to which it had formerly short term, to which it had formerly been obliged to restrict its operations. But his explanation about the Harriman concern did not really carry conviction because he admitted that its failure was partly due to the action of the Societ Government in exploiting their own manganese fields in southern Russia in competition which proved disastrous to the private company.

Bow-Wows at Telephone Receiver He Knocks Over and Police Get a Hurry Call

LYNN, Mass., May 14-When an operator at the central exchange of the telephone company started to answer a signal shortly after 10 o'clock last night, she heard a series of strange cries, instead of the customary call for a connection.

The operator lost no time in getting into communication with the police station and notifying the captain that he had better summon the heavy artillery and proceed at once against the barber shop at 53 Central Avenue, where the instrument from which came the signals of evident distress is located. A quartet of officers got to the oint in short order, broke in the por, drew theirr evolvers, blinked and surveyed an astonished puppy which had knocked the receiver and didn't like the looks of "the thing." Loud laughter, re-ceiver hung up, revolvers replaced,

Large Hall for Conventions Considered Vital Factor in Boston's Progress

COMMITTEE TO LEND EVERY AID TO PLAN

Effort to Land the Democratic National Gathering in 1928 Serving as Impetus

The directors of the Boston Chamber of Commerce took action today to lend their full support to the proposed construction of a large convention hall in this city, a project which already has the backing of Mayor Nichols and others identi-fied in civic and real estate interests. Auditorium facilities comprise the only factor still needed to make Boston the convention city of the Northeast, the chamber declared in a statement announcing its official support of the undertaking.

The directors have authorized the chamber's committee on conventions to take an active part in meeting this need, and to assist in every way any private or public auditorium project. The value to the city of such a convention hall, conveniently situated and large enough to accommodate the largest national conventions, was

GOVERNMENT TO FORCE THROUGH LABOR BILL

By Wireless from Monitor Bureau via Postal Telegraph from Halifax

LONDON, May 14-The Government decided to cut the Gordian knot of the labor obstruction to the hardfought Trade Union Reform Bill by introducing a time table for the debate: Monday is thus to be devoted to forcing through the official motion of cutting short the discussions by fixing 12 days as the maximum for the committee stage, three for the report and one for the third reading. Eighteen hours discussion so far has been over the first seven words of the measure's initial clause.

EXHIBITION MONDAY AND FOLLOWING DAYS

A Home of Rare Beauty, For Sale-

One of the Charming Corners.

An ideal winter home of rare beauty is presented for sale-located in the distinguished Miami Biltmore residential section of Coral Gables,

The illustrations shown set forth the general plan of gardens and their relation to the house. The home consists of open Patios, Loggias, Living and Dining Room combination, three sleeping Chambers, two Baths, Kitchen, Garage and inside Port-Cochere. Servants' quarters are in a separate building.

Every detail of modern convenience has been carefully planned. The Patios and Loggias are arranged to invite the out-of-doors to take part in the home.

The detail of decorations as well as architectural features are singular. The original and individual designing is the work of an artist, and was executed by selected craftsmen. The building was carefully supervised by the owner.

Doors are solid walnut, hand carved and paneled pictorial curtains, hand wrought iron curtain rods, lighting fixtures, antique gates and grills, and many other details have a story to tell, yet are practical. Floors are imported Spanish tile. Furnishings are in the major part carefully selected antiques. The garden plans include many tropical fruit trees, annual flowers beds, perennial plantings, tile fountains, brick walks, etc.

All of this in a setting of tropical sunshine, Spanish coloring and architecture, salt air and glorious nights-make a home which is a beautiful thought expressed.

Star Clouds Are Piled in Serried Ranks; Mars and Venus Are in Conjunction; While Asteroids Crowd to Get Into Astronomical "Who's Who"

> By EDWARD SKINNER KING ny in Harvard University

DURING the year 1926, the records show that 115 planets were discovered. To those who have been taught, quite properly, that the only known planets belong to the solar system, this statement may come as a surprise. Other stars besides the eun may possess trains of planets, but any such distant objects as planetary attendants are far beyond the power of our largest telescopes. The newly-discovered planets belong to the group of planetoids, minor planets or asteroids, small bodies which circle the sun somewhere between the paths of the planets Mars and Jupiter.

The first asteroid to be discovered was found on the first day of the nineteenth century. It was called Ceres. Previously, only one planet had been added to those known from prehistoric times. This was Uranus found by Herschel. During the years following the discovery of Ceres, four other asteroids were picked up, namely, Pallas, Juno, Vesta and namely, Palias, Juno, Vesta and Astraea. In 1846 Neptune, the last major planet, was discovered, but the registration of minor planets pro-ceeded apace. There were four found in 1847. At the beginning of 1860, 57 were known. The visual discovery of asteroids was a laborious process, as they must be detected by their change of position among the stars. Dr. C. H. F. Peters of Hamilton College ac-complished much by hunting asteroids as a side issue in connection with observations for making a set of star maps. Now, photography is the dragnet by which the astronomer enmeshes the asteroids in such large numbers. Take a photograph covering a considerable field of view, and guide the instrument on the stars. Then, any asteroids of sufficient brightness will, by their planetary motion, appear as short lines among the star-point images on the developed negative. Or, the telescope may be guided at the rate of the average asteroid likely to occur in the region observed. In this case, the images of the stars are short lines, but the asteroids appear as black dots on the negative. Even a cursory examina-tion of such plates will speedily show any asteroids present, whether old

The year 1926 is not without parallel in asteroid discovery. It has been exceeded in the past. For example, 1924 yielded 124, though 1925 had only 89. The 115 finds of asteroids in 1926 were the work of 11 observers. Dr. K. Reinmuth of Heidelberg, Ger., led with 52, while Prof. M. Wolf, also of Heidelberg, followed with 15 asteroids. Dr. E. Delporte of Uccle, Belg., is credited with 13, and seven were found by Dr. H. E. Woods of Johannesburg. The asteroids found may not all be new. It requires some time on the part of the Rechen-Institut at Berlin, Ger., to determine this point. Already some of the asteroids of 1926 have been identified with those may assign any name which pleases him. To follow precedent the name may assign any name which pleases him. Izvestia, Soviet organ, commenting on the raid, says it virtually means the beginning of realization of the rupture of relations mentioned in Sir Austen Chamberlain's last note to Russia. It so bject, the paper adds, is to deal a blow at the "most vital nerve of Anglo-Soviet relations," and it is part of the policy of the British Government, which, in order to enact the trade union bill, must divert the attention of the public.

The raid, Isvestia declares, deals a blow at the International Economic Conference t Genev, to which, at the insistent desire of the powers, the from Halifaz

VIENNA, May 14-Austria's proposed union with Germany is brought into the foreground of politics here through the decision of the Agrarian Party, reached yesterday, to join the Christian Socialists and Pan-Germans to form a new government, which will be presented to Parliament when it meets on May 18.

The Agrarians succeeded at the re-cent elections in increasing their representatives in Parliament from 5 to 9. At the same time the Pan-Germans were augmented from 10 to 12, while the Christian Socialists, with whom they had previously composed the government, dropped from 82 to 73. The resultant situation has caused the Christian Socialists to endeavor to draw the Agrarians into the government, especially since the Social Democrats' opposition gained three seats and now totals 71.

Duty of Superintendent

In pursuing the policy of the state department, Commissioner Smith said that it was the duty of the school superintendent to make sug-gestions and the duty of the commit-tee to investigate them and through proper publicity to acquaint the pub-lic of the matters under considera-

"The policy of the superintendent should never be followed by the com-mittee," he said, "until it has become the policy of the committee, and the policy of the committee should never be adopted until it has become the policy of the community.

Smith also told the school heads that their organizations and the state department of education ere not two different forms of de-iriments, working at two different the various problems they are obliged to meet.

He likemed the power of school committees to that of Premier Mussolin, in its authority, and expressed the opinion that committees should have authority that will make the public look up to them and regard them as responsible. But he stressed the point that such authority belonged to them only as a body and not to individual members.

At the close of the meeting Dr. Smith urged that the use of the full name Massachusetts be encouraged by school officials and teachers, instead of the abbreviation "Massawith which residents of the State are used to giving their address.

Teaching Service

Teaching Service

At the morning session Frank W. Wright, director, Division of Elementary and Secondary Education and Normal Schools, talked of the teaching service, its sources of sup-ply, its quality and the salaries paid. Stating that the yearly demand for teachers in the State is about 1900, he sald, "We can provide for every child in every schoolhouse in Massa-chusetts a trained teacher. That means a teacher with four years of high school and two years of profes-sional training beyond that point."

Speaking of the quality in teachers and the efforts being made to guarantee a constantly increasing degree of efficiency, Mr. Wright said that a selective plan for choosing from high school candidates who qualify for normal school, on the basis of scholarship and personality, is being used with excellent results. He also advocated a three-year course as the normal school minimum.

"I am sure," he said, "that Massachusetts is not going to lower the price for trained teachers. There is not the slightest indication of de-pression in teachers' salaries, but we

Mr. Wright characterized as a wholesome situation that ought to guarantee good teaching service," the act that almost 25 per cent of the 22,000 teachers in Massachusetts are taking extension courses this year. There are 56 courses attended by teachers with an average enrollment teachers of Massachusetts as "a body of teachers with a degree of profes-sional training that cannot be sional training that matched in the Union.

Talk on Budget

During the afternoon session at the Hawthorne Hotel the Rev. Gar- ing house on Aug. 7. Elbert S. Brigfield Morgan of the Lynn school committee, referring to the professional idea in the teaching force, said, "If the teacher is to meet the task of impressing her personality on the student it seems obvious that the teacher cannot afford to go on leaning on just what preparation he or she got when they came to the profession 10, 15 or 25 years ago."

Mr. Morgan stressed the import-ance of novelty and pungency in teaching and the danger of reaching the dead line of self-satisfaction. He believes, he said, that every thing in teaching must be considered from the standpoint of the child, that no particular value ought to so reach into the consecration of our spirit as the value of the child, and that no school committeeman should have any other vision than the interest of the child. "I believe," he concluded, "that in this matter of compulsory education there goes with it a corresponding responsibility to put before our chil dren people not only able to teach, but able to understand them, so that education may be made a way of easure and a path to peace."

JOBS FALL OFF BUT INDIVIDUAL PAY INCREASES

Shoe Business Affected in March-April Period, Says Report

A slight increase in the average weekly earnings of Massachusetts labor, together with a decrease in the total number of employed and a decrease of the aggregate pay roll are reported by the Department of Labor and Industries from their records covering March and April.

A comparison of the returns from the 1047 identical establishments represented in the April and March reports, shows that the number em-ployed dropped 2.3 per cent, the ag-gregate pay roll decreased 2 per cent, and the average weekly earnings were raised three-tenths of

There were relatively few impor-tant changes in the industries, the principal change being in the representative boot and shoe establish-ments in which the total pay roll decreased 10.3 per cent and the number employed decreased 6.9 per cent. In the manufacture of stoves and stove linings, a minor industry, the total pay roll decreased 12.6 per cent, and the number employed, 9.4 per cent. Seasonal conditions had much to do with these changes.

As an indication of the extent of the changes in employment, it may be noted that eight of the industries-specified and the miscellaneous group together showed a gain of only 300 persons, and the remaining in-

"In April the employees in all establishments in only one industry (rubber goods), were reported as working on full-time schedules, and in seven other industries employment was better than 95 per cent of nor-mal. In 26 other industries a majority of the employees were on full time. The returns show, therefore, that in 34 out of 39 industries specified, all or a majority of the em-ployees were working on full time. For all industries combined, there was an increase in the average weekly earnings per person from $24.67 in March to $24.75 in April. In only three of the 39 industries did earnings vary more than $1, the items all being increases, as follows: Slaughtering and meat packing, $1.62; copper, tin and sheet iron, $1.56, and newspaper printing and publishing $1.32. Changes of less than 50 cents per person were noted in 19 of the 39 industries. Five of the 1047 establishments covered by this survey reported general wage adjustments. Four of the adjustments were increases affecting a total of 145 employees, and averaged 7.5 per cent. The single decrease was one of 6.0 per cent, affecting 200 employees of a boot and thoe establishment.

Like many other things, the birth of the Atwater Kent Radio Hour was of the Atwater Kent Radio Hour was something of an accident. John T. Adams, president of the Wolfsohn Musical Bureau of New York, had a radio receiving set in his home. One night, while entertaining friends, he turned it on. One of the guests voiced the opinion that there was a continued sameness in the programs and tinued sameness in the programs and that there was no new feature of note on the air to attract listeners. That gave Mr. Adams the nucleus of an idea. Why not have the great stars of the concert and operatic world radiocast? Surely their names would prove attractive and radio listeners would tune-in to an extent never before realized. However, there were many obstacles in the path of accomplishment, not the least of which was the finding of a sponsor with forethought to contribute such a program to radio listeners. In ad-dition, there was a decided and determined antipathy toward radio on the part of concert managers, and a re-luctance on the part of the artists themselves to sing or play for an invisible audience.

"If I had thought that radio would my idea in the first place," Mr.
Adams said recently in commenting upon the close of the second Atwater
Kent Radio Series. I believe radio will help any artist by enlarging his or her audience and create curiosity, if used judicially, but whether it would be wise for any well-known artist to broadcast too frequently may still be open to question." Mr. A. Atwater Kent of Philadelphia saw the significance of Mr. Adams' idea and at once arranged to place Sunday evening concerts of this type on the

Walter G. Haenschen was born in St. Louis, Mo., and after studying in the grade and high schools of that city graduated from Washington University. He commenced the study of music when 7 years of age under Robert Goldbeck, an uncle, one of the more prominent of European artists and a director of musical activities of conservatories in both Berlin and London, who later served as a member of the Chicago Faculty of Music in association with Leopold Godowsky.

Mr. Haenschen entered the navy as a seaman in 1917 and after the armistice he was honorably dis-charged with the rank of ensign. During the time he was in the service of Uncle Sam, he had abandoned music completely. He was chosen by the directors of the Brunswick Balke Collender Company to organize the recording division of that company. In 1924, during the first Brunswick Hour of Music Series, radio learned to know Haenschen "Underneath the Japanese Moon. ing the Brunswick Hour Orchestra.

He proposed that the two associa-tions, the National Association of National Association of change. Cotton Manufacturers and the Amer-ton Textile Merchants of New York declared that he regarded the meeting as one of the most signifi-cant in the history of the industry. "In itself," he said, "it indicates a recognition of our community of in-terest in all that affects the welfare and progress of this industry." Asks Right to Organize Capping a day's suggestions for betterment of the textile industry. William B. MacColl of Pawtucket, R. I., president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, declared that cotton manufacturers should have the right "to organize to regulate production and establish uniform cost standards under proper Government control.

Discussing the work of the Cotton Textile Institute, Walker D. Hines, president, said, "The more production can be conducted along orderly lines and the more the enforced and drastic curtailments which must inevitably follow overproduction can be avoided, the more economical production ought to be and the more satisfactory conditions ought to be from the standpoint of the labor in the mills."

"The institute is anxious to do what it can to aid in making statistics on production, stocks on hand and unfilled orders complete and co-operate with associations repre-senting jobbers, converters, finishers. and others to get a more com plete picture than is possibly ob-tainable from the mills alone.

Hospitable to Low Prices "The industry seems in recent years to have shown an extraordinary hospitality to abnormally low prices. We have seen situations where, when the cost of cotton-the raw material of the industry—falls, the prices for cotton goods fall promptly and yet when the price of cotton rises, the prices for the goods how surprising reluctance in step ping up with the price of cotton."

His study of the industry has not led him to believe that costs of production are generally excessive. said, and the explanation "must n the exceptionally low level of the

Along with this there appears to be frequently a falling off in prices during the summer and a shrinkage in the margin between the price of the goods and the price of the cotton used in their manufacture.

"To a newcomer in the busi ness these things look very much like seasonal overproduction, which keeps prices abnormally low and then carries them even lower, and which, nevertheless, still leaves the mills without sufficient demand to keep up their production and leaves them no alternative but to cut down their production. When we can get statistics according to a group or types of goods covering several years, this matter can be studied to even better advantage."

A. Lincoln Filene, of Boston, representing the National Retail Dry Goods Association, said he believed directors of that association would put up a sum of money, if the textile manufacturers and wholesalers would match it, to establish a trade relations group in the cotton textile industry.

"Such machinery once set up would enable us all to know more and guess less where we stand in our relations. Circumstances will drive us together ultimately. Why not an-ticipate the future and come together of our own free will now?"

Is a Month of Events

During the month of May Miami and Florida will see in operation a new way of meeting the needs of the community.

Sixteen events, carefully chosen to do the most good in satisfying your merchandise wants will be staged.

They take the place of the MAY SALE, long a tradition, but now eliminated this year, in the better understanding of helpful retailing.

The store windows, the local newspapers, the mails will bring a cozinuous story of the eventful occasions. You can profit by following them.

This statistical Biblical information 600,000 persons present s printed in the Country Club Christian, the weekly organ of the church bearing that name:

The Bible contains 3,566,480 let ters, 773,746 words, 31,173 verses, 1189 chapters and 66 books. The word Lord occurs 1885 times. The word reverend occurs but once, which is in the ninth verse of the 11th Psalm. The middle verse is the eighth verse of the 118th Psalm. The twenty-first verse of the seventh chapter of Ezra contains all the letters of the alphabet except the letter j. The nineteenth chapter of II Kings and the thirty-seventh chapter of Isaiah are alike. The longest verse is the eighth verse of the eighth chapter of Esther. The shortest verse is the thirty-fifth verse of the eleventh chapter of St. ohn. There are no words or names of more than six syllables.

School for Canters

The first seminary for cantors in America will be established in the fall by the Modern Cantors' Associa-tion, an organization of 55 reformed cantors. According to Isidore Weinstock, secretary, increase in the synagogues all over the United States has necessitated the training of young men for the cantorate.

The association, Mr. Weinstock said, will be against the appearance of cantors professionally as unethical and incongruous. Like rabbis and ministers, they must limit their service to the religion and not cheapen it, because of the remuneration, by public performances. A school was begun by the cantors late in 1925, but had to suspend a year ago because of lack of funds.

Five New Bible Translations The British and Foreign Bible Society issued during the year ending March 5 completed versions of the Bible: Luna-Inkongo, spoken in Belgian Congo; Omyene, spoken in the Gabun; Annamese, spoken in Annam; Dobu, spoken in Papua; and Esperanto. The number on the society's list is now 593, being: Bibles 144, New Testaments 138, and portions 311.

LEADERS RETAIN THEIR PLACES

Hornsby and Fothergill Are Still Well Above

CHICAGO, May 14 (P)—Eight of the 10 leading hitters among the regulars of the American League are still above the .400 mark, with the season four weeks old, and Robert R. Fothergill of Detroit is still in the front with a mark of .419, in averages compiled today, including last Wednesday's sames.

today, including last Wednesday's games.

Several pitchers and pinch hitters, notably J. B. Shaute and G. E. Uhle of Cleveland, are hitting above the Detroit star's mark, in the few games they have played. Urban J. Shocker of the New York Yankees is another, 400-hitters, probably holding onto a seat among the elect until G. H. Ruth decides to come up and occupy his customary place in the first 10. Now he is down in the .322 class, though he is again leading with eight home runs. The Yankees, leaders in team batting in the league, dropped from .335 a week ago to .316 this week, and Detroit passed the Athletics to take second place with .302, the only other .300 hitting team in the circuit. Heilmann, Blue and Warner of the Tigers led the hitting drive.

Alphonse Thomas of the Chicago

Blue and Warner of the Tigers led the hitting drive.

Alphonse Thomas of the Chicago White Sox is the only American League pitcher to achieve five victories, but his one defeat brings his percentage below the trio who have perfect records to date with three victories apiece. They are Hudlin, Cleveland, W. H. Collins of Detroit and Pennock of the Yankees. Grove of the Athletics keeps his lead as the hardest worker with 61 innings pitched in 10 games, and he has retired 36 bat-10 games, and he has retired 36 bat were common from very early times. It is possible that the Chinese were the first makers. The Romans on their first invasion of Britain brought time been found in excavating the ruins of Roman villas and dredged from the beds of the Thames and other rivers. The articles found have principally been in the form of dishes, challec cups, and aspons to various designs. Some are beautifully incised with different patterns, the edges having raised moldings, showing that pewter making was at that time thoroughly understood. As the Roman legions left this country, in the year 411 A. D., these articles.

vessels, but in a fragmentary condition, were found in 1877 by the Rev. C. H. Eagleheart near some remains at Appleshaw in Hampshire, England. They are now to be seen in the British Museum. These pieces date from about the year A. D. 350. Early post-Roman articles in England made in pewter are scarce, except a few rings and other small articles.

The cup is 3% inches in height and the paten 4½ inches in diameter; they bear no evidence of any orna-mentation. In size and general outline it follows examples of the Nor-man type 1170-1359. The cups of that period were wide and shallow, while in the fourteenth century and later they became taller and the base had more flowing lines.

Church vessels in pewter are now difficult to discover, as these pieces were often melted down, put to secular use, or replaced in favor of white or plated ware, if the coffers of the parish could not afford silver. In the year 1630 a law of the Reformed Church of England re-quired that the wine be brought "to the Communion-table in a clean and sweet standing pot or stoup of pew-ter, if not of purer metal." Curious vessels for church use were the little "chapnets," or cruets, for the holding of the water and the wine, those made for wine having a V (vinum) upon the top of the cover and those for water having an A

In 1473 Edward IV gave to the company its first charter. From this time in the Lovanian line, or he may have come as an adult immigrant about 1790. No one knows. But that he lived near the border between the two counties is abundantly attested in the discovery of the chests signed pewter utensils came into general use among the nobility and those whose positions enabled them to rise whose positions claused them to rise superior to the wooden platter or trencher of the poorer classes.

At this period china and porcelain were unknown, and so highly valued was silver that prior to the reign of Richard III, 1400, few even who were monarchs could boast of more than half a dozen silver spoons. Knives and forks, it may be mentioned in passing, did not come into use until considerably later. Knives were introduced about the year 1563, while the forks are first remarked upon in 1608 by Thomas Coryate, the traveler, who was much entertained by the novelty of the new weapon. Why make a fuss over a talent that has never been tried and that may win, upon test, but an average rating? Well, I am not pretending to "discover" an American master.

Two other soloists made their first appearance in Cincinnati at this year's Festival. They were Richard Crooks, American tenor, and Horace Stevens, Australian baritone. Mr. Crooks is a very promising young artist. His voice is endowed with a peculiar sweetness that charms an audience. His upper register is singularly clear, and even in mezzo voce is quite rich. His phrasing is intelligent, and he has a considerable degree of dramatic power. Quite naturally his work is not entirely mature, but it is pointed in the right direction. He sang very competently in the scenes from "Fidelio" which were presented at the second concert, but reached a higher point in artistry in the duet with Florence Austral from the Prologue to "Götterdämmerung," and in Siegfried's Tod. These revealed his power of dramatic and emotional concentration, and he made them vital and moving.

Horace Stevens has splendid native equipment, but his singing stock in trade unfortunately stops within its limits. His voice is deep, rich, and beautiful, but his production does not show it to best advantage. A commendable restraint

For the readers of this paper it is perhaps not necessary to describe the new pisho in every detail, but it will be of some use to point out that there is, above the usual keyboard, another counding an octave higher, which may be coupled with the lower keyboard by a pedal. The great advantage of the double keyboard piano-is that technical difficulties are reduced to a minimum, that stretching of the hands is no longer necessary because of the co-peration of the two manuals, and hat octaves can be played legato like simple passages, with the greatest speed.

It is not a state concern; consequently its proceedings as an institution are not the concern of any state. It continues, as always, to owe its fundamental support to the hacking of an individual or a syndicate, recouped by the patronage of society, wealthy opera lovers, and the opera-loving public generally. Without these last it would despite the sentimental protests of the entire community, have disappeared long ago. Meanwhile the original lease, which has atili many years to rup, is in safe, considerate hands, and there is, in the opinion of the present writer; not the least danger of a realization of the catastrophe that has been suggested.

There are, above all, the great and abiding qualities of artistic prestige to be remembered and preserved.

Hundreds of Miles Away

Hundreds of miles away from here I know a small grey town, With white roads climbing out of it and blue hills looking down; And there a deep, clear river flows, in silence all the day, Yet wakes at night and sings wild songs that steal your heart away.

Often of nights, my thoughts speed there on swift enchanted feet That hasten through the still, grey town and climb the silent street, While folks in London dance and sing and turn night into day, I walk in dreams by moonlit streams, hundreds of miles away. -WINNIFRED TASKER, in The Bookman (London).

The apple blossom has not come to its perfection this season until the middle of May: even here, in this west country, the very home of the ... apple tree! Now it is, it seems, all the more beautiful because of its lateness, and of an April of snow and sleet and east winds. ... It is most an explication of the flowering apple trees I have ever looked delightedly at, adding those pictured by poets and painters, in clouding that one beneath which Flammetts is standing, forever with that fresh glad face ... looking out as from pink and white clouds of the multitudinous blossoms—if could see all that, I could not find a match for one of the trees of today. It is like nothing on earth, unless we say that, indescribable in its loveliness, it is like all other sights in nature which wake in us a sense of the summer blossoming trees, in all lands we have visited, just because it is so common so universal—I mean in this west country—so familiar a sight to everyone from infancy, on which account it has more associations of a count it has more associ

HIGH-PRICED ISSUES STILL DOMINATING

Many Cross Currents Are Encountered in Short Market Session

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, May 14 — After an early exhibition of strength, in which various groups showed sharp advances, today's brief session of the stock market developed numerous currents. Selling conducted elsewhere under cover of the rise in the leaders, eventually slowed up the general advance, and caused substantial realizing.

Distribution of large railroad orders and squeezing of short interests in Baldwin Locomotive, which went up to 206, a new peak, were the outstanding causes of their early good showing. Rumors of favorable developments in the packing industry were believed responsible for animated buy-ments in the packing industry were believed responsible for animated buying of Wilson & Co.

Confusion in the market vanished toward the close, when high-priced stocks, particularly the railway equipments, were given another vigorous whirl upward. United States Cast Iron Pipe went up 9 points, Wilson Packing preferred 6, and Wilson Company A 4.

The closing was steady. Total sales approximated 1,000,000 shares.

Foreign exchanges opened easier, with demand sterling around $4.85-3-16 and French francs around 3.91½ cents.

Quiet continued to rule in the bond market today, although prices were generally firm. Bonds of the secondary grade were at the base of most of the limited demand.

Early profit-taking developed in Chesapeake Corporation 5s which sold down a point and a half, but the loss was quickly recovered. Delaware & Hudson convertible 5s went up more than 3 points, while Granby 7s also had excellent support.

EXTENT OF SLUMP

Following the serious alump in Berlin Boerse prices Thursday, practically all issues took further drastic declines, consequent upon a decision made at a meeting of leading German bankers Thursday to restrict security credits and upon impaired marginal positions.

The last two days' most leading ocmmon stocks declined so sharply that deflation amounts in some cases to 25 per cent. Expectation of a higher Reichsbank rate, a generally tighter monetary situation and warnings from high quarters that stock prices are too high have all been instrumental in causing the slump.

Sale of a large government internal bond issue a short time ago was one of the causea of high money, as banks were forced to take over much of the issue, which restricted their ability to grant credits and drained the market of funds.

The extent of the day's declines may be judged from the following list of stock prices, comparing closing quotations Friday with those of Thursday:

WEEK'S REVIEW OF BUSINESS AND FINANCE

Most Indices Show Trade Is Gaining—Money Easy -Brokers' Loans Un

neasured by the various indices show reneral improvement this week. It was thought that the Mississippi

It was thought that the Mississippi flood would interrupt to a considerable extent the country's normal movement of goods, and car loading figures for the second and third weeks of April seemed to bear out this contention. Later developments, however, indicate that the flood is not having nearly the serious effect on general business as anticipated.

This fact was brought out strikingly this week when the report of car loadings for the last week in April revealed a decided increase compared with the previous weeks and the corresponding week in 1926. Loadings totaled 1,260,440 cars, a larger total than in any previous week this year, and greater than in any corresponding week on record.

Business Shows Increase

Business Shows Increase

The volume of business during the first week of May, as measured by check payments, was larger than in the preceding week or the corresponding week last year. The volume of new building contracts awarded in 37 states was lower than in either the week before or last year.

New building and engineering contracts, however, for the month of April for the same territory exceeded April, 1926, by 6 per cent, and were only 3 per cent below the record volume of the preceding month. The total volume of new construction to May I is only 1½ per cent behind the corresponding period last year, and is 19 per cent ahead of the first four months of 1925.

Automobile sales and production continue to mount. Several plants have recently increased their output slightly, and two large makers have started production on new lines.

The Treasury Department's call for the retirement of the Becond Liberty 4½s caused heavy buying of Government and other high-grade bonds. The fact that Secretary Andrew W. Melhon did not announce the character of the new securities that are to be offered was interpreted to mean that the Treasury expects to obtain as advantageous terms later on in the year as can be obtained now; in other words, that money rates could be expected to continue easy and bond prices firm.

Second only in importance to the Treasury announcement was the New York City's $60,000,000 bond issue which was offered to the public to yield from $50 to 3.90 per cent. These are the best terms at which such an issue has been sold in many years.

Brokers' loans increased $36,332,000 for the week ended May 4, bringing the total up to the highest point for 1927. Loans are now $200,000,000 larger than in the middle of February, when the upward trend began.

FALL RIVER CLOTH SALES SHOW SLUMI

FALL RIVER, Mass., May 14 (Special)—Local mill men say they cannot account for the sudden slump in the cloth market this week, with sales dropping to 85,000 pieces after last week's rush which resulted in a trading total of 200,000 pieces. Sales for several months have averaged 100,000 pieces weekly, making this week's quota sub-normal.

Narrow print cloths were practically all that buyers were looking for. With demand centered on these styles prices in this particular jumped an eighth of a cent. Some slight interest was shown in the wider prints and sateens and twills which were so decidedly active a week ago. The sateen market continued unchanged, the 4:37s selling for 10%c and the 4:70s for 9%c for mearby delivery.

Standard sizes are today quoted as follows: 37%-in, 64x60s 7%c: 39-in, 56x44s, 5%c: 27-in, 64x60s 7%c: 27-in, 56x52s, 4%c: 35-in, 56x44s, 3%c.

BANK OF TAIWAN IN DIFFICULTIES

TOKYO, Japan, May 14 (P) — The Bank of Taiwan (Formosa), whose recent difficulties led to government financial measures for its support, is now facing another difficulty in the form of a run by call depositors.

For the purpose of meeting its objections, the bank applied to the Bank of Japan for an advance of 10,000,000 yen (about $5,000,000), but the application was refused on the ground that the Formosan relief bill only entitles the Bank of Taiwan to advances for the purpose of paying ordinary depositors.

(The Bank of Taiwan, in common with most Japanese banks, suffered runs more than three weeks ago. The moratorium decreed by the privy council of April 22 to stem the financial crisis ended yesterday when Japanese banks resumed payments. No runs were reported.)

west finds a quick response in the market.

Most of the underlying strength in the wheat market is due to the changed views of the trade in regard to the old crop conditions. Europe has demonstrated conclusively that it will take the big surplus stocks from exporting countries without any distress.

Argentine wheat has been sold and shipped in huge volume, Australia has sold as much of her surplus as the pool cared to, and Canada has continued to ship huge quantities from early last fall up to the present time, 19,000,000 bushels, but this figure did not stagger the foreign markets, as Liverpool prices held strong practically all through the week. Chicago July wheat is relatively lower than Winnipeg and Buenos Aires, and is about on a normal basis compared with Liverpool, while Liverpool is under a parity with the continental marketa. This shows a decidedly sound situation in regard to the old crop.

CHICAGO, May 14 (Special)—After the big advance in prices for grain last week and the fore part of this there was, a lull in the demand for a time, but toward the end of the present week the demand for corn broadened again, and all grains were given support on small recessions. News on the wheat market was favorable to holders.

The weather except for a few days was unfavorable in Canada, and the most optimistic reports show seeding to be 10 days to three weeks behind normal schedule in the prairie provinces.

In some parts of our Northwest seeding also is incomplete. In Manitoba only a small portion of the seeding has been done, and the planting in Saskatchewan is not much more than part of a small portion of the seeding has been done, and the planting in Saskatchewan is not much more than been good buying on the dips. Honors for Arts, Too

New York Timest Football has a place of great importance in university life. Glee clubs travel about the country and win friends. Track meets draw crowds and relatives swarm when the dramatic club pulls into town. The daily routine of class work is lost, as far as the public is concerned, in a welter of publicity that has nothing to do with the fundamental purpose of four years in college. Cups for prowess in sports or other spectacular activities bring applause that is as perfunctory as it is accustomed. But when prizes are awarded for academic superiority the occasion is more unusual. Yet it is a wholesome indication that something hesides physical welfare receives attention.

Columns in the daily papers, learned articles by philosophers who maint or interesting themselves in present-day sensations, and a prominent place is the public mind are the portion of husky youngsters who can run faster or kick more accurately than anyone cless has everdone. Their fame is large, but it is impermanent. In a year their names do not bring a flicker of recognition. The scholarship awarded for further study in the arts is more likely to bring personal reward to those who receive it and lasting renown to the university.

VISUAL EDUCATION

Philadelphia Public Ledgert A Chinese proverb says in effect that a picture is worth more than a thousand words. This truth has long since been borne on the minds of educators, for even the crude illustrations in the school geographies of half a century ago are remembered when the text is forgotten. Modern developments have carried the lesson still farther; and the lantern slide and the motion picture are now indispensable parts of classroom equipment in the best schools. An interesting experiment is to be tried out next year in the public schools of 10 typical cities in this country, when courses of interesting experiment arruction in seography, elementary science and hygiene are to be taught by means of movie films and comparisons made with classroom results from the usual oral methods. A conference of educators is to be held in Rochester at the end of this month to plan for the experiment, and the results will be watched with interest by schoolmen everywhere.

EDITORIALS

Responsibility of Overseas Writers

THE vigorous denial by Mr. Sisley Huddleston, The Christian Science Monitor's staff correspondent in Paris, of the reports that the failure of the French fliers to reach America had been the cause of an outbreak of anti-American feeling in the French capital is, we think, a real contribution to international good

For some reason, many American newspapers saw fit to fill their columns with reports from Paris of violent manifestations of hostility to the United States. The immediate and inevitable result was the instant development of a feeling of resentment toward France in America. Newspaper editorials no less than the personal utterances of the man in the street aided in fanning the flames thus started. The publication by the State Department of a cable from Ambassador Herrick seemed to give offi-cial authentication to the reports of hostility now shown to have been purely unfounded. It is difficult to avoid the conclusion that had the newspapers, or press gathering organizations most active in this campaign, been half as zealous to get the facts as they were to print the provocative rumors, the tempest now happily stilled need never have been aroused.

It should be the study of American newspapers to enforce upon their foreign correspondents recognition of the fact that they fill positions of the utmost dignity and importance, and that the information they send for publication in the United States may be made the basis for serious international antagonisms, or on the other hand may serve to maintain good feeling between the United States and the nations of Europe. The endeavor to interpret the people of the country to which he is accredited in their best light to the readers of his newspaper should be the ceaseless effort of the correspondent in a foreign land. He should regard himself as an unofficial diplomatist, and just in proportion as the corps of overseas writers do recognize the highly influential nature of their employment, so will its conditions be made for them more dignified and better worthy of the endeavors of men of the highest attainments.

Averting a Strike of Pupils

THE valuable co-operation which a parents' association can give to a board of education was illustrated recently in New York City when a threatened strike among the pupils of School No. 53 was averted by the prompt action of the local branch of the United Parents' Association. The Board of Education ordered the transfer of 600 younger children to an annex, which meant a trip of fifteen blocks from their homes for some of the boys and girls and made it impossible for a number of them to return from school for luncheon.

While a petition to the Board of Education was being considered, the parents' association members in the district undertook to provide hot meals for the children. Daily for a week the president of the organization went to superintend the making of from forty to seventy quarts of soup at a near-by bakery. Dishes were rented and taken to the school and the mothers served the soup with bottles of milk, fresh rolls and sweet crackers. The children were told that they might bring money if they wished, but no child was refused food for lack of money. The boys and girls brought in about $41 in nickels and dimes and the parents' association is paying about twice that amount to settle the bills.

It meant hours of extra work for busy housewives, for they not only had to take the food to the school annex and serve it but they had hundreds of cups and spoons to wash daily. Their attitude, however, is summed up by the president of the organization, who says, "It lots of fun washing those dishes.

As a result of the kindly co-operation with the school authorities, at the end of a week it was arranged for those children who live near the annex to be put in classes there, while the others were returned to the main building. It is instances such as these which are building up a friendly attitude between the education offi cials and the parents of children attending New York City schools, and which are making the United Parents' Association a recognized factor for good in civic affairs.

Gold and Credits

TNDOUBTEDLY considerable interest attaches to the recent announcement of the increase in foreign loans placed in the United States, it being claimed that such loans floated during April totaled a record. Probably of even greater significance is the fact that the gold imports of the United States have again been increasing. The net imports of gold over exports during the first quarter of 1927 amounted to approximately $100,000,000. Contrasted to the total of some $200,000,000 in foreign loans floated in April the situation becomes the more significant. The tendency of shipping credits abroad and of importing gold has apparently gained renewed momentum. It is too serious a phenomenon to be explained away as another evidence of a desire on the part of international financiers to strike a balance between their accounts.

Prior to 1924 the United States went through a period of gold inflation. During that time the movement of gold was decidedly toward America with the result that commodity values as measured in money values were thrown out of alignment. Then it was that persons began to talk about the "cheapness" of living in certain countries as compared with others. Such a situation would not have existed had not the gold balances of the world then been thrown out of joint and international trade been impotent to effect an equalization of commercial balances. The period was followed by one wherein the sundry nations endeavored to restore their gold reserves and once more to bring their currencies back to par or to a stabilized new par at which point business might be continued upon a normal basis. The rebuilding of gold reserves inaugurated a period of borrowing abroad for "gainful" enterprises. It was then that American financlers began to measure their foreign loan offerings upon the basis of whether or not the purposes to which the borrowed money was to be put would be commercially gainful for the borrowers. That was a point of view expounded at the convention last year of the American Investment Bankers' Association at Quebec. It has again been more recently voiced at the an-nual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in Washington by Thomas W. Lamont, a partner in the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. And the Secretary of Commerce, Herbert Hoover, pointedly called attention to this funda-mental of foreign borrowing at the convention of the Third Pan-American Commercial Con-

The subject is one that the world might well be reminded of forcibly at all junctions such as the present. The importation of gold is not a goal to which American bankers or American statesmen are looking forward. Loans made for "constructive purposes" are not necessarily the kind of loans which would encourage the importation of gold, but rather the importa-tion of goods and services, which, taking the place of cash settlements, enables the foreign countries to rebuild their depleted gold reserves and restore living costs to a normal basis.

Sequels of the Filibuster

TOTHING could have occurred to furnish more convincing additional emphasis of the need of a closer correlation of all gov-ernmental agencies than the disaster along the Mississippi River, coming at a time when the Federal departments find themselves without authority to approve necessary expenditures because of the failure of Congress, in its closing hours, to pass the usual appropriation measures. A filibuster, premeditatedly arranged, and enforced under the rule permitting unlimited debate in the Senate, was continued until the hour of final adjournment. It was not denied at the time, and has not been denied since so far as is known, that it was the purpose of those lending aid to these tactics of delay to compel the President to call Congress in extraordinary session under the emergency authority with which he is invested.

As a result of the last elections the complexion of Congress is considerably changed. In the Senate the balance of voting power is held by those avowedly opposed to many of the Administration's policies. The so-called progressive program which has been outlined will, perforce, await the convening of the regular session unless it can be made to appear that an emergency, foreseen or unforeseen, makes imperative the calling of a special session. There is reason to suspect that those who participated in the filibuster at the close of the last session believed that the failure to pass the deficiency bill, providing for an appropriation of more than $93,000,000, and another bill appropriating $8,600,000 to be used in buying seed, fertilizer and forage in districts where entire or partial crop failures had occurred, would create such an emergency as would compel the President to call the new Congress together. Under the strict rule which forbids department heads to contract expenditures to be met out of future appropriations, a somewhat serious embarrassment has resulted. The determination to establish an inflexible budget has brought, together with unquestioned economic benefits, a situation not easily met in what would be, ordinarily, merely a temporary emergency.

But the situation has been made all the more serious because of the need for available funds caused by the floods in the South. There is no lack of money, but it is not immediately available to meet the needs which the Government should be permitted to meet automatically. It is true, of course, that the Red Cross, a semiofficial governmental agency, is collecting and generously dispensing vast sums for needed relief. Other organizations are assisting in caring for refugees and preparing to aid in the ask of restoration and reclamation. But the situation, serious as it is, would be less discouraging if it were known that the Federal Government stood ready to pour into the stricken areas all the money required to meet the need as soon as the waters recede and impoverished farmers and townspeople are able to begin the work of rehabilitation.

Quite naturally the situation serves to support the contention that provision should be made for the convening of a newly elected Congress within a few months, at most, following its election. Defeated members of both houses, it has been pointed out, lack, or are inclined to lack, that feeling of responsibility which prompts timely and constructive service. To permit those on the eve of retirement to obstruct the passage of necessary legislation, or to allow the threat or promise of the passage by the recently elected Congress of measures opposed or rejected by an outgoing Congress to operate in any way to defeat or hinder the proper functioning of the co-ordinated agencies of government is unsafe and impolitic.

The American Maritime Policy

THE attitude of American steamship operators toward continued government operation of the merchant ships may be summarized briefly: Government management is unwise, but private operators are unable or unwilling to purchase the ships at a fair price and to guarantee their continued operation on established trade routes for a period of years. Until private capital can be interested in acquiring the present ships, or constructing new ones, the policy of the Shipping Board is clear, T. V. O'Connor, its chairman, being on record as asserting that the board intends to carry out the Merchant Marine Act, which provides for an American merchant marine, ultimately to be privately owned. But until private American capital can and will take them over, ships are to be operated for the protection of commerce and national security.

This was the substance of a message sent to the Pacific American Steamship Association in response to a query which that organization addressed to Mr. O'Connor asking the board's position, as a result of the action taken by the United States Chamber of Commerce in passing a resolution favoring a privately owned merchant marine. Undoubtedly, among the members of the chamber are many ship operators, and it is only through them that a policy of private operation of the fleet may be looked to. Their plans thus far have given little indication that they contemplate purchasing any of the ships.

Meanwhile, the Shipping Board is undertaking to see that the flag of the United States is kept on the seas. Passenger and freight routes have been established, managed, in general, by operators for the board on a commission basis, and the losses of the fleet have gradually decreased, according to apparently official reports.

Steps are being taken which may result in the construction of two large liners in the Atlantic to run with the Leviathan, and even though this step is not effectuated, the Merchant Fleet Corporation (as the "Emergency" Fleet is henceforth to be known) intends to renovate two of the larger vessels now laid up. If present plans go through, the renovation will be equivalent to a complete rebuilding of the ships. To be operated in the United States Lines, these ships promise to bring to that government line badly needed additional passenger-carrying-space, for despite the assertion that "dry" ships do not appeal to ocean travelers, the Leviathan carried the largest number of passengers last year, and other ships of the line are always well patronized.

Regardless of the individual's belief in the advantages or demerits of government operation of a merchant fleet, the fact that private operators have not undertaken to keep the flag of the United States on the seas makes it the more satisfying to realize that the Shipping Board intends to maintain a fleet until such time as the vessels may be turned over to other operators.

America's Musical Awakening

PERA became indisputably American from can education, as happened when the Eastman School of Music of Rochester, N. Y., opened an opera class and instituted an opera stage. Music in general has been slow to respect as an element of American public and endowed education, and correspondingly is one of the last of the fine arts to find place and influence in the national expression. Great should be the satisfaction, then, of those directing the affairs of the Eastman School that their program of instruction, undertaken a few years ago, has proved successful. A few young men and women were selected and trained for studying women were selected and trained for studying and interpreting the masterpieces of the lyric theater. They have blossomed out into the Rochester American Opera Company, which lately gave a week's season in New York to high acclaim; presenting works of Mozart and Puccini, indeed, and what made the effort important, presenting them in a manner incontestably and ingratiatingly American. Exceptions allowed, opera as given in the United States for the past one hundred years has been nothing more or less than an article of import, distributed by a type of musical middle-man known as impresario; and it has been performed in the languages of Continental Europe, those being the ones in which the singers, for purposes of the stage, were exclusively schooled. Seldom, however, has this imported opera had the absolutely authentic marks of the country of origin: It has shown a mixture of colorings-Italian, French, German, American and perchance Russian. A company assembled from all quarters of the world by an impresario can never address the American public so im-plicitly as can one trained in an American community, under academic auspices, and taught. with thoroughness the musical technique of the English language. Rather strangely, perhaps, one of the re-markable triumphs of the American musical awakening is to be credited to a town like Rochester, which is ordinarily immersed in its highly specialized affairs of trade and manufacture. And yet, when native common sense and national institutional method are applied to the problem of opera, a happy outcome should hardly cause surprise. Granted that the city where the thing is achieved takes modest rank in the census list, art has small concern

The Stranger Within Our Gates

E SAW Minna for the first time one day in winter seven or eight years ago. We had come along the lane on snowshoes to see if we could get some milk Ine on snowshoes to see if we could get some milk for breakfast. As we reached the cottage two or three small flaxen-haired children pressed little pink noses against the window and made signs to us that their mother was in the cow shed further on up the hill. Even in those days Minna's one cow was the standby, not only of her own family, but of the immediate neighborhood.

Minna had just finished milking as we reached the low stone wall which divides the little piece of barnyard from the lane. She came out of the cow shed toward us carrying a pail of the still frothing milk; a quaint, picturesque the lane. She came out of the cow shed toward us carrying a pail of the still frothing milk; a quaint, picturesque figure with an old red handkerchief wrapped around her head and tied beneath her chin. She was wearing a faded blue sweater over her woolen petticoat and on her feet she had a pair of her husband's boots. With the wintry background of the show-covered pastures I was reminded of some colorful postrards I had once received from Russia. "How do?" she said, and her smile was about the brightest thing imaginable.

It was always difficult to understand how anyone cou resist Minna's friendliness. From the first, one realized her winsome smile must eventually break through the reserve of the little New England community and win its way into the people's hearts.

Not until some time after this did we become acquainted with her husband; a big stolid looking Finlander, who turned his eyes away from us like a shy child when we spoke to him for the first time.

"I do the speaking for him," Minna explained. "He understand what you say but he no like at o speak."

"It ensier for woman than man," she went on to "Woman go into service like me; live with nice lady and gentleman. They not understand when woman speak Finnish, so woman learn quick to speak like them. Man, he go to work in quarries. Lots more Finns just like him so he go on talking Finnish just same as when he's in

It was on this occasion that we first heard about "Cousing Fanny," who, like Minna, had gone to work for an American family while still new to the country and its ways.

"She once make very big mistake," Minna told us 'Everything all right until lady have to leave my cousir Fanny to work alone. Before lady go out she point to big clock hanging on wall and then make signs with her hands. She want Fanny to eat lunch at 12 o'clock but Fanny. think that lady mean for her to clean clock, so she scrul it well inside and out. It very hard when people no understand each other."

it well inside and out. It very hard when people not understand each other."

Conjecturing that the clock might have been an hearloom we were inclined to agree with this remark.

Minna seems to have any number of relations. You may walk into her home any Sunday afternoom and find every chair occupied by a "cousin, a sister, or an aum." Nearly always they certain from looking at you, keeping their eyes for the most part fixed upon the floot. This is particularly true of the husbands who occasionally seempany them. Most of them come from the cottages in the rather unlovely vicinity of the quarries, where the men are employed during the greater part of the year.

But Minna loves the trees and fields and the lines to be where elle-can grow things, so that although when we first knew them Pietari was working in the matrice with the other men he had already found a home for himself and his family in the lane; the little lane which goes up hill and down dale across the pastures until it bees itself in the woods beyond.

The people of the neighborhood were not altogether pleased when these strangers moved into their midst. It seemed an intrusion, for all along the way one hears names that are to be found in the oldest records of the district. Minna's nearest neighbor traces his descent back through the generations to the forbear who sailed over the sea from England and became the first schoolmaster in the settlement. At heart he and his wife are kindly people but there is a pride of tradition that erects an invisible barrier between the "natives" and newcomers.

We were strangers ourselves, and Minna must have felt

We were strangers ourselves, and Minna must have felt a bond of sympathy, for whenever she came to work for us she would bring a bunch of flowers or some other offering from her garden, and she always seemed pleased if we stayed to talk for awhile when we went to get milk or eggs. Her bright smile and cheery, "How do?" were bestowed upon all alike, and although her industry became the byword of the community she was never too busy to perform a kindness. But it was several years before she and her family were spoken of in any other way by the older residents than as "the Finns at the corner of the lane."

There came a day when circumstances took us away rom this part of the country, and when we returned after the absence of a year or more we found Minna's little cottage empty. It had been painted and renovated almost recognition. In reply to inquiries we learned that our friends were living in the cow barn.

Minna came out to greet us, holding in the crook of her arm the new baby we had not seen before. Two of the older children smiled a welcome and then retreated shyly to the shelter of her skirt. She laughed as she answered our questions.

"We have to move out of the cottage," she explained, "because the owner want now to live there himself; so Pietari clear out the barn and make it all clean. He put whitewash on walls and we stay here until he build

She saw no reason for commiseration; "I like myself in this place very well," she told us.

We were anxious to know what had happened to the previous occupant of the barn. "Where is your cow, Minna?" we asked.

Minna?" we asked.

"She quite happy and comfortable, too," was the reply.

"She live in shelter underneath barn. She not mind at all."

Minna's new house now stands on the summit of the hill for everyone to see; a solid, substantial looking structure that somehow reminds one of Pietari himself. It is built of stone from the quarries and stready appears as a fitting part of the landscape. The other day aligns took me inside and showed me the extent of the landscape.

built of stone from the quarries and aiready appears as a fitting part of the landscape. The other the Minna took me inside and showed me the extent of the Minna took me inside and showed me the extent of the Minna took handiwork.

"Some day," she said, "we have nice new jurniture, too." Already the greater part of the floor is covered with rurs woven on her own loom during the long winter evenings. Folded away to await the coming of the new furniture there are gayly colored bed covers and strips of embroidery that came from Finland. "They make me ramember my father's and mother's home," she said, as she was showing them to me. Then she pointed out that from her own doorstep she can look across the sea toward the north.

Already her neatly planted vegetable plot gives promise of ample provisions and her flower beds are a mass of color. The distant tinkling of bells proclaims the fact that Minna's three cows are on their way home from the partiture to be milked. Persistent industry and cheerful adaptability seem to be earrying Minna and her family toward comfort and prosperity.

The of all, her neighbors are now beginning to apprecion the fine qualities of this blue-eyed Finnish woman. Some of them have visited her in the new home and not long anat, when I was talking to a woman whose ancestors belyed to make the history of New Eagland, I learned that she had taken care of Minna's baby one evening while the two parents went with the older children to a festive Finnish gathering in the village. "I told her I'd just as her as not take my mending up to her house at any time," she said.

The smile had won.

The Week in Geneva

THERE are 100,000 Swiss living in France who, like all other strangers living there, naturally dislike the laws of August and December, 1926, which increased the charge for the Cartes d'Identité and made it necessary to renew them every year. Protests were made by the Swiss and other governments against such a "tax on strangers" as contrary to the observance of treaty rights. strangers" as contrary to the observance of treaty rights, and the charge has now been reduced to 100 francs for visitors, who pay the full tariff, and forty francs for salaried workers, students, artists, etc. And now, as the identity card need not be renewed for two years, it can hardly be called a very serious tax. Indeed, the sum for the Permit de Séjour, which the stranger who resides in Switzerland has to pay, is on a higher scale, for it has to be renewed every year. In addition there is a small fee which must be paid before permission can be obtained to work. In these circumstances it does not appear that the Switzerland any grounds for complaint against the the Swiss have any grounds for complaint against the

Should those addicted to alcoholic liquor be interned as a menace to themselves and their neighbors? Six Swiss cantons have already answered this question in the affirmative. St. Gall, the pioneer in the crusade against intemperance, having passed a law in 1891 to this effect, the Canton of Vaud followed suit with a more elaborate code in 1906, and laid it down that the person who by his habitual intemperance either compromised his own situation or that of others, might be thus taken care of. In Vaud, too, a man may be forbidden to enter a saloon, while in Bale-Ville people may be interned who are incapable of managing their own affairs, who expose their families to misery, are a danger to the public, or who make a disturbance.

The object of all this is preventive; the intemperate person is placed under control in the hope of correcting his bad habit. And in this way quite a number of unfortunate individuals have been restored to a proper sense of their responsibilities. There is, in fact, much to be said for the system, which the Grand Council of Geneva has now been invited to consider. It must not, however, be supposed that the Swiss Cantons which have passed these laws have a particularly intemperate population. There is less intemperance in Switzerland than in many other European countries. But the Swiss people have a high

Is the cause of votes for women making headway in Switzerland? This question is of particular interest because the Council of Bâle-Ville has passed a resolution in favor of a revision of the Constitution in order to effect this reform. It is true that the resolution was passed only, by a majority of five votes, 6û to 61. But all the progressive parties voted for it, the Socialists, the Christian Evangelists and the Communists, who had the support of three Radicals and four Liberals. The interest of this vote lies in the evidence which it appears to afford as to the swing of the middle class vote toward woman suffrage, for it was the Radicals and Liberals who turned the scale. The Council of the city will now prepare a law on the subject, and if passed it must again be put to the popular vote. But it must be remembered that it is only a question of municipal franchise, and present indications are that it may be a long time before women get the parliamentary vote in Switzerland.

There have always been holiday courses at Geneva in connection with the university for the study of international affairs, but so far there has been no permanent organization of this kind. It is now proposed to set up a university institute which will offer to students and the public generally a better opportunity of studying the work of the League of Nations and its international reactions The personnel of the institute will be composed of a small number of professors of different nationalities in order to number of professors of different nationalities in order to mark the international character of the instruction which will be given. It will-work in close connection with the University of Geneva, the professors of which will assist it, and one of the most interesting features of the institute will be courses of lectures by well-known experts on international relations. M. Manthoux, formerly head of the political section of the League of Nations, will preside over the new institute, which will be administered by a council of five members, who will include the chief of the Federal Department of the Interior, the president of the Department of Public Instruction of Geneva, the rector of the university, M. Osten Unden, of the University of Upsala, Sweden, and ex-Minister of Foreign Affairs of that country, and Vernon Kellogg, the American member of the Comand Vernon Kellogg, the American member of the Committee for Intellectual Co-operation.

"The Yankee Clipper" and the Horn To THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

To The Christian Science Monitor:

When reading the criticism in the Monitor of the motion picture, "The Yankee Clipper," I was struck by the sentence: "The heavy storm is encountered by the Yankee Clipper after passing the Horn." I do not in any way eriticize the writer, but as an old sailor who has traversed those seas in his youth and knows the locality well, I would like to know how a sailing vessel could make the long leg against contrary trade winds across the Pacific Ocean around Cape Horn.

The old tea-clippers used to leave harbor during the months of the favorable monsoons, northeast being gentle and fair, for the homeward passage. After sailing through the China seas and safely navigating the most difficult portion of the hemisphere, they would emerge through the Sunda Straits, which separate Sumatra from Java, into the Indian Ocean, proceeding as best as the strength of the the Sunda Straits, which separate Sumatra from Java, and the Indian Ocean, proceeding as best as the strength of the prevailing monsoons would permit, toward the African coast. Then, after battling bravely against contrary winds and currents of the Aghulas Bank, they would double the famous Cape of Good Hope, and so on to the southeast trades with squared yards, as the song tells, "Rolling home trades with squared yards, as the song tells, "Rolling home past St. Helena."

Sailing along with fair wind would at last bring the ship into the doldrums, with its variable winds and calms, which delayed many a clipper. After pulling and hauling the yards to catch each breath of wind for some days, the glad northeast trades would come bouncing along to send the ship on her way to the westward and the warm waters of the Gulf Stream.

Making westward, but avoiding the Bahamas, they would finally make a landfall on the coast of the United States, sometimes at Cape Hatteras, or according to the direction of the wind experienced, at some point farther north. Then they would haul up for Cape Cod and Boston Bay, keeping a good lookout for the Boston pilot.

Anyone who has had this experience will not forget it, however long a time between the ordeals.

Unfortunately, with the passing of the old sailorman some of the episodes depicted are not true to facts, and they leave one who has had the experience cold.

I have not seen the picture, and I only draw attention to the fact that no sailing vessel coming from China evernegotiated the passage around the Horn. One of the old-time whalers might have done the trick, in a humdrum existence of searching for whales.
